In the Media:

Dr. Andra Davis, Associate Professor at the University of Portland School of Nursing and University of Utah College of Nursing alumna (PhD 2014), interviewed Dr. Nanci McLeskey regarding the End-of-Life Nursing Education Consortium \(ELNEC\) project, a national and international education initiative to improve palliative care. Consortium leaders have begun spotlighting faculty who have incorporated the six Undergraduate ELNEC modules – 1) Introduction to Palliative Nursing, 2) Communication in Palliative Care, 3) Pain Management in Palliative Care, 4) Symptom Management in Palliative Care, 5) Loss, Grief, and Bereavement, and 6) Final Hours of Life – into their nursing programs. The purpose of the interviews is to share information that will help other colleges add the modules to their curriculum. During the interview, Nanci described leading work to fully integrate the ELNEC modules into an existing course – NURS 3305 Foundations of Clinical Nursing Care, a required course for first semester pre-licensure students. Faculty sequenced the ELNEC modules to align with and supplement content that students already learned, and students complete a simulation to apply the principles of what they learned.

Professional Service:

Zoë Robbins is the newest member of the Impact Mental Health Board. The mission of Impact Mental Health is to provide rapid, transformational whole-person psychiatric care to uninsured, low-income Utahns with serious mental illnesses. Its co-equal mission is to provide state-of-the-art integrative community-oriented clinical education for future mental health clinicians who can sustain the impact for future generations.
