Professional Development:

Dr. Linda Hofmann was accepted into the AACN-Wharton Executive Leadership Program. This competitive fellowship is designed to advance chief academic administrators to a higher level of leadership. The curriculum provides Fellows with the concepts and tools needed to enhance leadership capacity and hone skills that are essential to thrive and move forward strategically.

Dr. Jennifer Macali was recently accepted as a Fellow in the 2022-2023 cohort of the Johns Hopkins University SOURCE Service-Learning Academy. The SOURCE Service-Learning Academy is a one-year, comprehensive program that equips Fellows with all the necessary tools and methods to develop critical service-learning partnerships and courses. Fellows learn how to become more effective teachers, work equitably with local communities, and advance the civic mission of higher education. In addition, Fellows engage with others on issues of justice, critical reflection, and the purpose of science, health, and education in our world.
